Beginning as early as 1909 when the book Hindus: A dying race helped Hindu communalists knit antagonistic castes together by creating anxiety about Muslims, saffron demography has sought to whip up fears of a very high rate of Muslim population growth. That this kind of "demography" suffers from serious methodological, philosophical and empirical problems does not deter its practitioners from declaring a "demographic war" and enjoining Hindus not to go in for planned parenthood. - Reproduced.

process, 1950-51-2002/03: The demand side.
Economic and Political Weekly, 45(41), 2010(9 Oct):
p.47-58.

Aggregate demand growth in India during 1950-51 to 2002-03 has been consumption-driven at the margin, with the relative contribution of consumption having risen in the high growth phase covering the period 1980-81 to 2002-03. In this phase, consumption growth accelerated and the gap between rates of growth of investment and consumption narrowed substantially. Further, in this high growth phase, aggregate demand growth was consumption-driven not because of increases in the private final consumption expenditure ratio but because of increases in the government final consumption expenditure ratio. - Reproduced.
